Between December 9th and 13th, we took part in the Common Module on Gender Perspectives, held in Athens, Greece. The module provided us with an enriching and international experience, bringing together participants from different nations to reflect on the importance of integrating gender perspectives in military and defense environments.

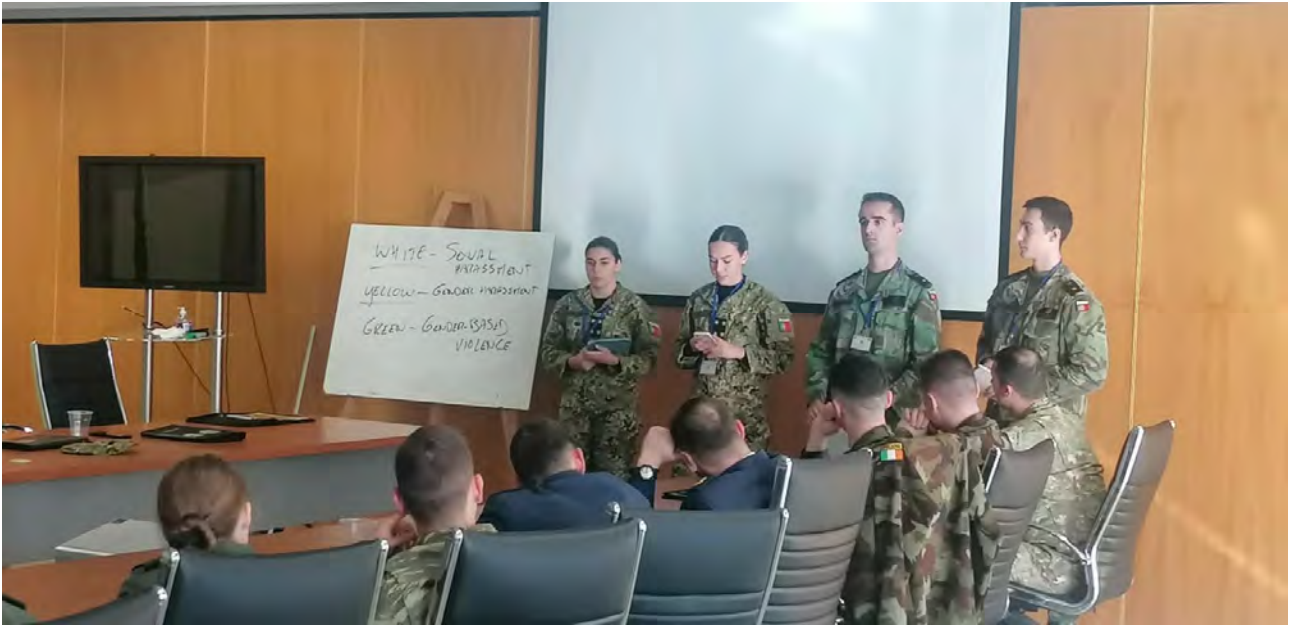

During the program, we had several didactic sessions given by experts, where topics such as gender equality, inclusive leadership and the challenges of integrating gender into military operations were discussed.

This module not only deepened our knowledge on the subject, but also promoted intercultural dialogue, allowing participants to share good practices. The experience reinforced the relevance of inclusive approaches to strengthening cohesion and efficiency in military organizations.
